2003

COMMENCEMENT

THE JOURNEY

Today I walk a path forged by my own accomplishments.

*In accepting my degree,
I acknowledge the years of diligence,
the fruits of dreaming,
and the power of will.*

*More than a symbol of my own hard work,
this diploma is a way of thanking those who've helped guide me —
friends and family,
professors and peers.
Without their endless support,
I wouldn't have traveled this far.*

These are the people whose lessons I keep close to me, and whose teachings I will disperse out into the world.

*Today, I boldly move

TO SEATTLE UNIVERSITY
GRADUATES
OF 2003

As you walk across the stage today, in the undergraduate and graduate ceremonies, you'll only have time to shake my hand and receive your diploma. The official photographer will catch the moment: usually your smile and the bald spot on the back of my head! We won't have time to speak individually. But if we did have that opportunity, here is what I would say.

This year Seattle University has rearticulated its objectives into a new Mission Statement. We have reemphasized two of our most important values: "We put the good of students first" and "We value excellence in learning with great teachers who are active scholars." I hope these last few years have allowed you to experience these values firsthand, and that you leave Seattle University today with a more refined intellect, greater self-confidence and a renewed ability to challenge yourself to excel. I'd be curious to know what grade you'd give Seattle University and whether we'd be magna or summa cum laude.

Our Mission Statement also encapsulates our purpose into a single sentence: "Seattle University is dedicated to educating the whole person, to professional formation, and to empowering leaders for a just and humane world." Note that this sentiment stretches from Seattle University to the world. On this graduation day, ask yourself if your studies have stretched you toward caring for and understanding the people of our world. This stretch is the Jesuit vision of education.

What lies between Seattle University and the world is what is distinctive about our method: We work at forming professionals by "educating the whole person" and "empowering leaders for a just and humane world," and doing it in a manner that is genuinely "dedicated" to you. As you reflect on your accomplishments today, perhaps you can recognize how this distinctive combination has taken shape in your studies.

Next to taking pride in their own family, people most of all want to take pride in their university. I know that you already take pride in SU. I promise that we will work to make your alma mater an ever-expanding source of pride for you. We aim to make Seattle University "The premier independent university of the Northwest in academic quality, Jesuit Catholic inspiration, and service to society."

As students, you have helped make SU the great institution that it is. As alumni, what you can do now is "manifest the fulfillment of our mission in your lives and professions." All of these hopes are in my handshake as I present you with your diploma.

My thanks and congratulations to you,

ABOUT SEATTLE UNIVERSITY

Founded in 1891 as a Jesuit Catholic men's college, Seattle University has grown in size and stature to become the largest and most diverse independent university in the Pacific Northwest, with a student population of 6,300. Seattle University's 48 acre campus houses eight schools: Arts and Sciences, Science and Engineering, Nursing, Education, Theology and Ministry, Law, Business and Economics, and the Matteo Ricci College. The 2003 U.S. News and World Report ranks Seattle University among the top 10 schools in the west that offer a full range of masters and undergraduate programs, and the Princeton Review has recently added Seattle University to its list of the top colleges in the U.S.

In its 112 year history, Seattle University has been consistent in its commitment to academic excellence. Teaching, strengthened by active scholarship, is the faculty priority. Small class sizes, and the personal attention given by Seattle University professors and administrators, help students meet the rigorous demands of the curriculum.

One of 28 Jesuit Catholic universities in the United States, Seattle University draws upon the Jesuit educational philosophy to develop critical thinkers and compassionate leaders able to promote a more just and humane world.

Seattle University's location in the heart of a great city and dynamic region provides learning, service, cultural and career opportunities for students. With the University's emphasis on experiential learning, students enhance their classroom experience by working on projects with local companies, interning in local schools or hospitals, participating in study-abroad programs, and other learning opportunities.

The true measure of the university's excellence is the success of its graduates. Seattle University's 43,000 alumni include distinguished individuals in business, public affairs, education, the performing arts, athletics, science and technology, and other fields.

THE HISTORY OF THE GRADUATION CAP AND GOWN

American academic costume (also referred to as academic "dress" or "regalia") had its origins in the ancient European universities. Apparently, it was devised to distinguish academic persons, such as doctors, licentiates, masters, and bachelors from other parts of the population. Gowns probably were a necessity because of unheated buildings, and hoods were needed to cover the heads of medieval scholars. Most universities issued strict regulations concerning the design and use of academic dress.

As they were founded, American colleges and universities inevitably adopted the gown, hood, and cap from their European antecedents. Although some common standards and practices were observed, no uniform code or system existed until late in the 19th century.

The principal features of academic dress are three: the gown, the cap, and the hood. The flowing gown comes from the 12th century. It has become symbolic of the democracy of scholarship, for it completely covers any dress of rank or social standing underneath. It is most often black, with pointed sleeves for the bachelor's degree, long, closed sleeves for the master's degree, and round, open sleeves for the doctoral degree. The gown worn for the bachelor's or master's degree has no trimmings. The gown for the doctoral degree is faced down the front with velvet and has three bars of velvet across the sleeves in the color distinctive of the faculty or discipline to which the degree pertains.

The wearing of the cap was a privilege won by freed slaves in ancient Rome, and so the academic cap is a sign of the freedom of scholarship and the responsibility and dignity with which scholarship endows the wearer. Old poetry records the cap of scholarship as square to symbolize the book, although some authorities claim that the mortar board or cap is a symbol of the masons, a privileged guild. The color of the tassel on the cap denotes the discipline.

Heraldically, the hood is an inverted shield with one or more chevrons of a secondary color on the ground of the primary color of the university. The color of the facing of the hood denotes the discipline represented by the degree; the color of the lining of the hood designates the university from which the degree was granted. The length of the hood varies by academic degree. The hood for the doctoral degree is the only one with panels at the sides.

JAMES D. SINEGAL

Honorary Degree Recipient – Undergraduate Ceremony

Jim Sinegal, founder and CEO of Costco Wholesale Corporation, has, with the same sort of efficiency and lack of pretension that describe his stores, revolutionized warehouse shopping, created thousands of family-wage jobs and, through his philanthropy and involvement, given care and hope to those in need.

Sinegal started his quiet revolution 20 years ago when he and his business partner Jeff Brotman opened the first Costco on Fourth Avenue South in Seattle. Guided by a mission to “provide members with quality goods and services at the lowest possible prices,” Costco has become a $40 billion international wholesaler with 415 membership warehouse stores in eight countries.

While building his business, Sinegal has also built a reputation for ethical leadership. Both Fortune and BusinessWeek magazine have featured Sinegal as one of the best CEOs and managers in the United States.

Sinegal’s leadership extends beyond business and into the community. He has served as a board member of United Way of King County, Zion Preparatory Academy and the national board of Communities in Schools. Sinegal is in his 12th year as a member of the Seattle University Board of Trustees, serving four of those years as chair.

In 2000, Sinegal and Brotman founded the Costco Scholarship Fund to help qualified underrepresented minority students attend Seattle University and the University of Washington. Since then, 150 Hispanic, African American and Native American students have become Costco Scholars at SU.

For the integrity Jim Sinegal has demonstrated as employer and businessman, for his leadership and vision and his dedication to helping others achieve success in their own lives, Seattle University confers upon James D. Sinegal the degree of doctor of humane letters, honoris causa.

KENT STOWELL AND FRANCIA RUSSELL*Honorary Degree Recipients – Graduate Ceremony*

Kent Stowell and Francia Russell, as artistic directors of the Pacific Northwest Ballet, have enriched the cultural life of our city and been an inspiration to the many lives they have touched during their 25-year tenure with the PNB. Their creative collaboration is responsible for establishing the PNB as one of the top ballet companies in the United States. The PNB has performed to high acclaim throughout the United States, as well as Canada, Australia, Europe and Asia.

Kent Stowell is the lead choreographer for the PNB, responsible for such memorable productions as Swan Lake, Cinderella, Firebird, Carmina Burana and PNB’s world famous version of The Nutcracker. Stowell began his career as a dancer with the San Francisco Ballet and, later, the New York City Ballet. He was lead dancer and choreographer for the Munich Opera Ballet before moving on to artistic director roles at the Frankfurt Ballet (a position he shared with wife and partner Francia Russell) and the PNB.

Francia Russell, in addition to artistic director responsibilities, also serves as director of the PNB School, which is both a training program for professional dancers and a dance school for children.

Under Russell’s leadership, the PNB School has established a reputation as one of the premier ballet training programs in the country. Russell gained fame early in her career as a lead soloist for the New York City Ballet, under the direction of George Balanchine. Russell was selected by Balanchine to stage his ballets, which ultimately she has done throughout the world.

Stowell and Russell are dedicated to sharing the beauty and expressive power of dance with children through programs such as Discover Dance and Bravo Ballet. The program DanceChance provides inner city kids with all-expenses paid opportunities to learn ballet.

Kent and Francia’s contributions to dance have been recognized by two prestigious awards: the Washington State Governor’s Arts Award, and the Dance Magazine Award, given to those who make significant contributions to dance during distinguished careers.

This past year, Seattle University has worked with the PNB to create an undergraduate program to accommodate dancers who otherwise would not have educational opportunities because of their demanding schedules.

The care that Stowell and Russell give to their dancers, their devotion to each other and their children, and their contributions to art and community are consonant with the Jesuit Catholic values of our institution. Seattle University therefore confers upon Kent Stowell and Francia Russell the degrees of doctor of humane letters, honoris causa.
