Gaveleer Club Plans Tourney

Seattle University's Gavel Club held its first organizational meeting last Thursday, Oct. 20. Newly elected officers are: president, Wayne Angevine; vice president, Steve Worseley; secretary, Sonja Vukov; publicity and program director, Felicia Bouker.

First on the club's activity list will be a Puget Sound League Debate Jamboree in Bremerton, November 2, at which the following members will judge debates: Wayne Angevine, Pat Barr, Felicia Bouker, Bunny Brosset, Brian Culberton, Rosemary Huebner, Jack Kompan and Kathe Ritzenthaler.

The club will also participate in the Pacific Lutheran College Forensic Tournament, November 21, 22 and 23 and the tourney at Linfield College in McMinnville, Ore., later in the year. At the present time, tentative team members are participating in intramural debates. The decisions rendered in these debates will help in choosing the teams to represent SU at various tournaments. Members will also participate in Oratory, Extemporaneous and Impromptu Speaking and Interpretive Reading.

Mr. Robert Larson, faculty moderator, has stated that Seattle University should go far in the field of forensics with the enthusiastic group that the club has this year.

Interested students are invited to attend meetings which will be held every other Thursday at 1 p.m., in the Conference Room.

Intercollegiate Knights Pick 16 As Pledges

By DAN ZIMPSEN

Seattle University's Wigwam chapter of the national service fraternity Intercollegiate Knights, began its annual four-week pledge period this week.

During the meeting held on Monday evening, the Knights selected sixteen pledges. Those who will be pledged during the next four weeks are Don Hutt, Chuck Poelzer, Dick Panger, Don Miller, Pat Vosse, John Irwin, Paul Doyle, Jerry Schlittler, Bob Combs, John Smith, Dick Ulrich, Mile Lemieux, Les Lorang, John Blankenship, Tom Hamilton and Milt Rambaud.

Others are Earl Breggeman, Jerry Grinstead, Jerry Zimmerman,

Dick O'Leary, Sam Ness, Dave Sigmon, Jack Kompan, Joe Honda, Leo Sellar, John Hoffer and Charles Nelson.

The month of trial will be a hectic one for the pledges. A series of stunts, interspersed with several social events will give the Knights an opportunity to meet the pledges and judge them on their qualifications for membership.

On December 5, after the pledge period is completed, the Knights will again meet to decide which of the aspirants have best qualified for membership, and on December 9 those selected as new members will be admitted to the organization.

Trying to "persuade" Jim Quinn to be her escort to the Sadie Hawkins Tolo are (l.-r.) Judy McManus and Mary Moe. Wonder who won?

'Great Show Coming,' Promises Mu Sigma

Mu Sigma's annual variety show, "Kaleidoscope," will be held November 11 and 12 at 8 p.m. in the Seattle University Gym. Tickets will sell at $1.00 for adults, 75¢ for student reserved seats, and 50¢ for student general admission. Student body cards will admit Seattle University students.

According to Don LaQuet, Mu Sigma president, "Kaleidoscope" will be a great show, one that no one should miss. We have had a bigger response for tryouts this year than ever before, and have found much exceptionally fine talent.

The committee heads are Ron Randall, Publicity; Don LaQuet, Production; Clara Mustacich and Sandy Pinsonneault, Tickets and Programs; Ron Bentz, Cast Party; Bernie Klee, Stage Manager; Pat Martin, Props; Patti Ivers, Costumes, and Barbara Cole, Makeup. Danny Ryan will again serve as MC for the show.

Officers of the Mu Sigma organization are: president, Don LaQuet; vice president, Sandy Pinsonneault; secretary, Mary K. Schaaf; treasurer, Ed Stasney; and publicity director, Ron Randall.

There will be a work meeting Saturday, Nov. 5, at 10 a.m. in Warren West Hall for prop making and set decoration. All people who signed up and anyone else interested are asked to come.

Anthropologist Speaks Thurs.

Mrs. James B. Watson, an anthropologist, will speak about her life among the native people of Eastern New Guinea on Thursday, Nov. 3, at 7 p.m. in Room 222.

Mrs. Watson and her husband, Dr. James B. Watson, have recently returned to this country from New Guinea where they lived in native villages for a year and a half. During this time they made a study of the pre-white way of life among the natives and of their reaction to the Europeans who have entered their area.

In addition to their work in New Guinea, she and Dr. Watson spent six months in the study of the Caquas, a Brazilian group, and have also carried on research in this country, devoting two summers to a community study of an Anglo-Spanish town in Southern Colorado. Besides this work in social anthropology, Dr. and Mrs. Watson have carried on archaeological excavations of American Indian remains in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Missouri.

Closed Retreats Scheduled Soon

Want to get away from it all and take a good look at life? Then, according to Father Louis Sauvain, S.J., a closed retreat is what you need.

A men's closed retreat will be held at Loyola Retreat House in Portland, Ore., on November 15, 16 and 17. The women's retreat at the Sacred Heart Villa in Seattle on November 16, 17 and 18 will have the Reverend James Goodwin, S.J., as retreat master. Sally Rude and Peggy Kimber are in charge.

Those interested in attending these closed retreats should fill out a reservation slip and drop it into the boxes provided next to the switchboard in the Chieftain, at Marycrest or Xavier Hall and in the Chaplain's office. The men may contact Lionel Jolly, chairman of the men's closed retreat committee, Bob Cole, Bob Schmid, Jim Murphy or Dan Lenoue, committee members, for more details.

Just what is a closed retreat? Father Sauvain, student chaplain, explains it this way: "A closed retreat is three days of rest, relaxation and refreshment during which you are given an honest and perhaps a new look at the big facts of life, so you can plan the future with a fairly clear blue-print or map of guiding principles to see you safely through life."

46 Applicants Named As A Phi O Pledges

By TOM DeMAN, News Editor
Alpha Phi Omega, national college service fraternity, announces the pledging of 46 men, including 35 freshmen, 10 sophomores and 1 junior.

Bob Bruck, vice president in charge of pledges, said, "This pledge period is not merely a routine. The club is getting big and we are trying to keep it to a minimum, therefore only those who show active interest will be accepted." Bruck further said, "This seems to be an exceptional pledge class and I know it will have good projects."

This pledge period will end with winter quarter with the pledges

Through Our Specs

Being classed as "youth" places quite a responsibility upon us. Youth itself often fails to realize the great potentialities which exist. The foundations of tomorrow's world are being built today with sand. It will take a strong, courageous group of men and women to hold the structure together. Unless they are prepared to shoulder the task, the structure will crumble.

In recognition of this need for fostering a sense of responsibility among Catholic youth, National Catholic Youth Week has been set aside from October 30 to November 6. According to the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Joseph E. Schieder, Director of the National Council of Catholic Youth, the purposes of observing the week are these:

1. To emphasize the importance of youth.
2. To encourage youth by making them aware of their capacity for good.
3. To display the talents, abilities, and resources of our youth.
4. To focus attention on the vast youth program functioning under Catholic auspices, and to reveal the depth of spirituality of our modern Catholic youth.

With the closing of National Catholic Youth Week on Sunday, November 6, Seattle University students will observe the 5th anniversary of the celebration by attending Mass and receiving Holy Communion at St. James Cathedral. All Catholic students are invited to join in commemorating the observance. Now is the time to recognize and accept our responsibility for the future.

You Know Me, ... Al Krebs

Over what may be called a cup of "Chieftain brew" it was our privilege to have a somewhat personal and comprehensive review of the recent revolt and eventual overthrow of Argentina's Juan Peron. The speaker on the other side of the table was Professor Clarence Abello, native of that country and now teacher of modern languages at SU.

In reviewing the fast-moving past few months in the South American country, Professor Abello continually emphasized that any of the people of the outside world that might have had rosy conceptions about Argentina under Peron were purely victims of cleverly manipulated propaganda.

Questioned on how feelings and relations between his country and the U. S. were, he told about how Peron employed 650 persons to turn out nothing but anti-U.S. propaganda.

(About a year ago this office was mysteriously closed down after the president's brother, Milton Eisenhower, made an official visit to the country.)

Because of the apparent support that Peron enjoyed from the labor faction we questioned whether labor was dignified any by Peron's regime and we were promptly informed no.

"The only thing that Peron did for labor was give them more money," retorted Prof. Abello.

Of course an interview on foreign affairs nowadays wouldn't be an interview without asking about Communism. We suggested that possibly now that Argentina is in a weakened state that they would be liable to communist treachery.

"During Peron's dictatorship the Communist party was the only organized party outside Peron himself that was privileged to send material through the mails," Abello commented.

He added, "Of course Peron would have them shot up every so often but they were still allowed to operate in the country."

Perhaps the most prolific remark of the day that came from the personable language professor was when we asked him to describe to us what kind of man was Juan Peron.

"Peron was an Al Capone, an Adolph Hitler, a Benito Mussolini and a King Farouk rolled into one," he replied.

Now that the "Romance of the Year" has passed into history I presume we can all go about our normal everyday affairs. Before it gets too far away, though, it would be interesting to just glance back a moment for some purely personal observations.

The question in point seemed to be not whether a member of the royal family should marry a commoner but whether a person of the so-called dignity of Princess Margaret could share the matrimonial bonds with a divorcee.

Everyone from the Archbishop of Canterbury to the London Times, not that there is a great difference between the aforementioned as both have been known to be in error, chimed in with their views.

It seemed rather ironic that all this fuss should be made over this point, not that we condone divorce, but the fact that the Church of England originally sprung from the issue of divorce.

Back in the 16th century King Henry VIII, at one time called "Defender of the Faith," was married to a Spanish princess, Catherine of Aragon. During his marriage to her he fell in love with Ann Boleyn, one of the Queen's ladies-in-waiting.

When he appealed to Pope Clement VII for an annulment he was denied and in anger Henry VIII broke from the Catholic Church and established the Church of England, appointing himself as its head. Since that time the governing sovereign has been Henry VIII's successor.

At the present time Queen Elizabeth II, Margaret's sister, is the official head of the church.

Seeing this paradox, it sets one to thinking just where church doctrine and personal whims are separated and how a religion professing to be God-like can contain such contradictory events.

Personally we were far more disappointed in the Steve Canyon-Summer Olsen romance than in the one between the Princess and the Pilot.

NOTES off the cuff

Many of you may have missed a very interesting little piece that ran in last week's edition of the Spectator under the Classified Ads section (Page 6).

The ad read: "WANTED—Two young men, each with pleasant personality, passable looks, fair intelligence, cars (not necessarily their own), modest funds—by two fairly attractive, but disillusioned young ladies. Intentions honorable. Call for interview at MU. 5700, Ext. 514, after 7 p.m."

You must admit, the foregoing was a bit unusual. Last Tuesday curiosity finally got the better of us and we decided to find out exactly what went on in 514 of Marycrest.

One of the young ladies residing there told us, "We were just in a silly mood one day and we wanted to see what would happen if we ran the ad. Since last Thursday we've had 21 calls about it."

"Everyone that called thought that he could fulfill the requirements," she went on. "We never found out whether any of them could or not because we always told them at the end of the conversation that we weren't really serious."

"It was all a lot of fun," she commented, "and we had many very interesting chats. And, all of them who called weren't SU boys either. We got two calls from Oregon State boys and two from UW fellows."

So there you have a very unusual story about a very unusual ad. And if you 21 fellows would still like a better explanation of this whole thing try to be satisfied with the words of the author Elizabeth Barrett Browning who said, "Girls have curious minds and fain would know the end of everything."

During last year's elections, campaigner Jim Ray promised that if elected he would seek two, instead of one, Student Body meetings per quarter.

Last week President Ray fulfilled

his promise when the faculty agreed to try the program of two meetings a session. This should convince some cynics that campaign promises can be kept.

SU's Variety Show, "Kaleidoscope," is right around the corner—November 11 and 12, to be exact. Production officials have the talent to make this a big one, and are now concerned with continuity—which was the chief fault of last year's show.

The Powder River Boys, who could have won just about any popularity contest on campus last year, will be back again, and may come out bigger and better than ever.

Most of the attention is focused on three or four women singers, all of whom are said to be scoring highly at rehearsals.

Next week's column will be devoted to a rundown of all of the talent which will take the stage come opening night. "Thirty"

SENSE and NONSENSE

• PAT RANEY

The time draws near for our bi-quarterly hassle with the books. This is a well-devised scheme to get people to study. That's right—tests.

But let us get to the matter at hand. The movie board showed a fine movie the other night. For those who missed it, this will be a short review. The title was "Ten, Short, Tall, Fat, Stout, Lean, Emaciated, Thin, Squat, Lanky, And Stupid Men." Let's see, is that ten? Oh yes! It starred that hero of the great White Way, Lank Burtcaster.

It was the usual "Snow White, Seven Dwarfs" jag, only with three extra dwarfs. Sno Whyte was a beautiful slave girl and the witch multiplied into 100,000 screaming sand fleas. The herd turned out to be the camel who kept asking if there was a doctor in the house to suit his T-zone.

After the usual monotony of running around in the Yakima Desert they finally met on a lonely sand dune and took up the old fight song of National Embalming School:

We live for you
We die for you—
National Embalming School.

The curtain then rang down and all 100,000 screaming sand fleas spelled out "The End." It was breathtaking!

They have a new contest on TV now that is a real haller palooza. To be eligible to win a gold mine that produces "genuine" lead, you just rip the top off two taxi cabs and send along with a plugged nickel and a self-addressed armored car to the sponsor. And whether you win or not, he, out of the kindness of his heart, will send you an autographed picture of Osgood Phlumf.

If you do happen to win, you get an all-expense trip to Ballard, a ride on a live bait boat, and a free course of dancing at Hooper's Gym. They warn you that there is only one prize and if you win there will be no refund. The decision of the judge is condemning.

Weel, chillun, must get back in the old rockin' chair and quit this clownin' for another day.

Like my old friend, Lonesome George, sez: I got to be moseying along.

Slightly Off

• NORRIS CARVER

I was reading the Wall Street Journal last night and did I run across a bargain! The ad read: FOR SALE—STEEL MILL—75,000,000. Which is kind of high. But if you have three of them, it's only 200,000,000. That's as crazy as a street cleaner singing: "I Love a Parade." Some of those tycoons are really rich. I knew one that had a home with an 18-hole golf course—inside. He had his good points though. General Motors at 96, Standard Oil at 125. You should see his apartment. It's in the basement of the Last National Bank. If you want to see him after three you have to slide down the chute. I know how he got rich, though. He used to live on the Sahara Desert and he saved his money for a rainy day.

Speaking of rainy days, we've had a few lately. And cold—even some of the masons have dropped six degrees. Last night I'll bet even my teeth were chattering. Of course I'm not sure, I don't sleep with them. It was as cold as Gabriel without his Heater. Really, though, we shouldn't gripe so much. We're lucky we don't live where it is hot. (If we don't watch our step maybe we will some day.)

Down in Texas it gets really hot. One day there I stepped into a pool of water and my feet didn't even get wet. I looked down and saw the water was just disappearing. It was so hot the tongues in my shoes were lapping it up. You don't wash your teeth there, you just dust them off. They have so many windstorms there they put landing gear on the houses and pressurize the rooms!!!

In closing I would like to suggest this book for better living: "A Scientific Analysis of the Stress and Strains of American Life, or Should Married Men work?"

COACH'S TEAMS HAVE IMPRESSIVE
SEASON RECORDS

JUNIOR COLLEGE
TRANSFERS FILL
ANY WEAKNESSES

Horace Albert Brightman, 32, is one of the most successful major college basketball coaches in the nation.

In a seven-year span, Seattle University's varsity basketball coach has compiled a phenomenal number of victories. Under Brightman's direction, the Chieftains have scored 162 victories against only 57 losses.

Brightman's teams have gone into five national tournaments. The Seattle U teams have competed in the 1951 National Catholic at Albany, the 1952 National Invitational at New York's Madison Square Gardens, and the 1953, 1954 and 1955 Western Regional NCAA Tournaments at Corvallis, Ore.

Brightman came into national prominence in the famous "O'Brien era" at Seattle University during the 1952 and 1953 seasons. Although he is generally credited with the "making" of All-American Johnny O'Brien and his brilliant twin brother, Eddie, Brightman's success as a coach seemed to hinge on what he could do without the services of the South Amboy, N.J., terrors.

Brightman's team went on to their best season of all time in the following 1953-54 campaign, winning 26 games in 28 outings. And those wins all came in a row, one shy of tying the national collegiate record. Last season, the Chiefs finished with 22 triumphs in 29 games.

AL BRIGHTMAN
No headaches wanted.

This season, Brightman's quintet embarks on its toughest schedule in the school's history, with opponents including Dayton University, Oklahoma City University, Santa Clara, the University of Portland, and a rugged lineup in the All-College Holiday Tourney at Oklahoma City which includes Pennsylvania, Oklahoma A&M, Tulsa, Loyola of New Orleans, Texas Tech, Oklahoma City and Idaho State.

NEW FACES SHINE —

Brightman greeted a host of standout basketball players at last Tuesday's opening drills in the SU gymnasium. Two outstanding players from last year's frosh team, Don Moseid, 6-0 all-state guard from Stadium of Tacoma and Clair Markey, 5-9, all - Cross - State League guard from Seattle Prep, looked good in the initial workouts.

Three junior college transfers, averaging 6-2½, showed promise in filling any worries about the forward spots. Transfers are Jerry Frizzell, 6-4, and Bill Rajcich, 5-10, from Grays Harbor Junior College, and Joe Handley, 6-5, from Long Beach City College in California.

Returning Chiefs include Dick Stricklin, 6-7 sophomore scoring sensation of last year, Ken Fuhrer, 6-5 forward-center from Port Angeles, Bob Godes, 6-9 all-state center from Ellensburg, Tom Cox, 6-0 guard from New York, Cal Bauer, 5-9 guard from St. Cloud, Minn., and Larry Sanford, 6-2 forward from Denver.
