Three-Step Revision Outlined:

Connell Cites Constitution Need

Attorney General John O'Con-nell said Wednesday that the State of Washington needs a new constitution. In a luncheon address to members and guests of the S.U. Marketing Club, O'Connell outlined a proposal to revise the constitution by November of O'Connell said the revamping of the constitution could be accomplished in three steps. The voters would need to authorize a constitutional convention in the November, 1967 general elections. The delegates to the convention would be elected for the convention which would be in the spring of 1968 with the subsequent submission of the new document to the voters in the 1968 general election.

O'CONNELL SAID, "The people need to make a fresh determination of the inhibitions they want to place on governmental power. The state is changing, and the laws and government must change and adapt with it."

Queried as to what changes he thought the constitution needed, he specifically mentioned the reduction in the number of elected officials from nine to four, annual sessions of the legislature and an intermediate appellate court to relieve some appeals burden from the State Supreme Court.

O'Connell also proposed the creation of an office of omsbuds-

O'Connell supported the idea that politics and government must adhere to higher ethics than the people they serve. He said the influence of the late President Kennedy made government respectable and decent and said, "Persons in government must practice as ethically as they can, even above all

Asked about the possibility of Sunday liquor sales, he said he favored the idea of liquor being served in places where food is available, keeping the law within "reasonable limits." He added that he supported the state monopoly system of liquor sales to maintain some restraint on the use of intoxicating beverages.

O'CONNELL'S speech to the Marketing Club centered about the consumer protection laws of the state and their application to business practices. The State of Washington has progressive consumer protection laws, stated the Attorney General, and the prime concern of a function of his office is the continued vigilance for the consumer.

He documented cases of poor business practices, fraud, deceptive advertising, gimmicks and come-ons and other unfair practices. He stressed the need for truth and fairness in business dealings. Adding that a practice for his office was to meet with trade organizations and help them set their own standards of ethical practice, he concluded. "The whole matter is one of good public relations. If the consumer can trust you then you sumer can trust you, then you have your reputation made."

Della Reese Comes to Seattle

By CATHLEEN CARNEY

Della Reese needs no introduction to those who ha e heard her recordings or have seen her on television. For the uninitiated, she is a singer of many styles of music, and began an 11-day engagement yesterday at the Edgewater Inn.

One of the most amazing facts about this singer of gospel mus-ic, ballads, jazz, folk songs and classical arias is that she has never had formal training. Her professional career was launched when she won a contest at age 21 singing in a Detroit night club. Previous to that, her experience had been with gospel

IN AN interview Monday, she commented that this gospel singing was excellent training for her present career. The demands of gospel music on a singer's voice, the need to project in a large group develop one's lungs and singing power as few other types of music can. A sharp sense of inner rhythm is attained from necessity there is no percussion section in the church. The professional attitudes of an entertainer — the realization that the performance must continue in adverse circumstances, whether one feels like singing or not, a poise in awkward situations, an ease in singing for an audience—all of these are highly developed by gospel singing experience.

WHEN ASKED if her religious background did not somewhat alienate her from her fellow entertainers, she remarked that there are few more religious groups of people than those in the entertainment field. They see in their travels so many different people in a variety of situations that their understanding of and sympathy with the human condition is constantly growing.

Because they are, as artists, sensitive people, they are more aware than are some other classes of people of the world around them. Being more subjective than people in different walks of life, they take to heart what they see around them, allow themselves to get involved in what is happening.

Editorial -

Is there a difference between "discretion" and "censorship"?

Seattle Mayor Dorm Braman contends that the city council was using "discretion not censorship" when it refused to allow Timothy Leary to speak Sunday at the Seattle Center Opera House.

On the other hand, Seattle American Civil Liberties Union attorney, Raymond Brown, maintains the council's move is an act of prior censorship.

WE AGREE with Brown. If a governmental body is allowed to decide whether a speaker can speak or not, then the Constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech will soon become meaningless. There is no means of telling what the limits of this "discretion" might become.

Freedom of speech has proper limits, just as any freedom does. With each freedom there is an accompaning responsibility. Until, however, a speaker oversteps these limits or refuses to acknowledge this responsibility, he should be allowed to retain this freedom.

WHILE IT is too late in the present case, we hope that the decision of the State Supreme Court is overturned by a higher court. Such a decision will assure that in the future the council will not be able to exercise prior censorship.

In this case the public did not lose the chance to hear Leary because he will be given a hearing at U.W. and also his speech will be carried by a local radio station.

But if these facilities had not been available, then the council's action would have deprived Seattle the opportunity of hearing Leary speak.

Ice-skating is a winter sport hand-tailored for the student unable or unwilling to spend the time and the money necessary for an enjoyment of the ski slopes. Skates may be rented the first time or two at the ice arena for 50-75 cents. Then a $1-2 investment at St. Vincent de Paul's or a $10-15 payment at a sports store will purchase a respectable pair of skates. The only other necessary equipment is plenty of warm clothing, including mittens to protect one's hands (especially for the first few falls).

Ballard Ice Arena can be reached by boarding the No. 18 Ballard Bus on First Avenue, riding out to 47th Ave. N.W., and walking one block west to 4776 Shilshole Ave. N.W. Ballard Ice Arena may be called at SU 2-9772 for information. The Highland Ice Arena is inaccessible by Seattle Transit, but can be reached easily by car. Located on 18005 Aurora Ave. N., its phone number is LI 6-2431. The Seattle Center Arena occasionally has skating on Sunday afternoons and evenings. Call JU 3-2900 for details. At all these arenas, the usual student price for two hours of skating is 75

CAMPVS FORVM

To the Editor:

Three weeks ago a Senate committee investigated Spirits because of its subtle existence on campus. The president and officers of the organization, the songleaders and cheerleaders and the publicity director of this year the publicity director of this year and last year were all called upon to help find the correct answers. This was not carried on in a negative or critical manner. All concerned were truthful and frank and much resulted from this meeting.

The by-law which made Spirits a separate entity from the pub-licity director was found to be vague in many aspects. This is the first year it has been in ef-fect and certain misunderstandings did result.

A LACK OF proper communication existed between those responsible for the Spirits and they were the first to admit it. From this point they said they would to the host three said they would be the best three said they would be the best three said they would be the said they would be the they would be they would be they would be they would be they wo do the best they could to make the pep club of S.U. something its student body, faculty and administration, alumni and the city of Seattle could be as proud of as we are of the team we support.

They promised action for the Homecoming game and were ressonably successful. The Senate, however, passed a bill Sunday eliminating a white shirt section.

An officer of Spirits has informed me that a red-and-white card section will be in operation at the next game. The student body should do all it possibly can to constructively lend a hand to make Spirits a reflection of team make Spirits a reflection of team support.

THERE ARE five more games in which this can be shown and efforts made toward building a good foundation for next year. Thanks is due to the officers of Spirits, George Stevens, yell king, and his fellow cheerleaders, Sheila McHugh and her vivacious songleaders, Butch Leonardson and his pep band and all who have upheld and promoted Spirits. Chiefs Trample Bobcats; Play Idaho State Tonight

By ED McCORMICK

The S.U. Chieftains, withstanding a last minute surge by Montana State, posted their second straight win over the Bobcats 69-61 Wednesday night in Boseman, Mont.

In the low-scoring first half, the score was tied eight-all with 11:49 remaining when the Bobcats jumped to a six-point lead and maintained this margin until the Chiefs tied it at 21-all with 5:25 left in the half. The Chiefs spurted to a five-point bulge just before the half ended but Montana State rallied and S.U. led only 30-29 at the half.

BOTH TEAMS were cold at the start of the second half. The Chiefs took a four-point lead but the Bobcats came back to tie it at 33-all. From then on the lead changed hands several times.

Finally Tom Workman put the Chiefs ahead to stay with two quick buckets. Suddenly S.U. got its fast break moving and shot to a 10-point lead.

With 1:39 remaining in the game the Chiefs were ahead by eight, but the Bobcats started applying full-court pressure and pulled to within four at 65-61. Taking no chances the Chiefs went into a ball control game and held on to preserve their second consecutive win over the Bobcats.

THE GAME was characterized by hard rebounding and frequent turnovers. Both teams were forced to shoot from the outside the first half, which accounted for the low score. The Bobcat strategy was to try and slow down the S.U. fast break and this worked fairly well for them the first half.

Jim LaCour did another excellent job of guarding high-scoring Tom Storm, who scored only six points. LaCour himself was high man for the Chieftains with 16 points.

He was followed by Workman and Malkin Strong with 14 points each. Jack Kreiger was also in double figures with 10 points.

High scorer for the game was 6-foot-3 Jim Moffitt of the Bobcats, who put in 18 points.

He was followed by center Jack Gillespie with 13, down

THE CHIEFTAINS now have a record of 13 wins and four losses and are still in the running for a bid to the NCAA regional playoffs. The Montana State Bobcats, leaders of the Big Sky Conference, are 9-8 for the season.

The Chieftains next game is against Idaho State tonight in the Coliseum. In the preliminary, the S.U. frosh will face the U.W. freshmen.

Kowabungas, Onions Prove Easy Victims

Contrary to past games, Wednesday's intramural action resulted in several high scores.

The Merry Men neared the century mark as they downed the Kowabungas 93-33. Ed Heckard paced the Merry Men with sixteen points as the entire team poured in baskets.

Scott McDonald, with 18 points, and Walt Havens, with 16, led the Chamber to a 70-53 victory over the Red Onions. High for the Onions were Pat Bradley and Tim Fountain. Both of them hit 15 points.

See our big selection of bridal sets.

Like the one about business. Especially big business. That it is beyond the rugged individualist's wildest daydream to enter this holy of holies because he'll lose something that's very sacred—like his independence.

Sure, it can happen. If a guy or gal wants to hide, or just get by, or not accept responsibility, or challenges.

We're not omniscient enough or stupid enough to speak for all business, but at a company like Western Electric, bright ideas are not only welcome, they are encouraged. And no deep is shut. Create a like is Western Electric in the in the in the in the interval in the people warding and in the people ward

There's an excitement in business. True, we're in it to make a profit, but working to

That's how we feel about the generality that claims you'll just become a little cog in a company like Western Electric. You might, of course, but if you consider yourself an individual now, odds are 10 to 1 that you'll keep your individuality. And cherish it. And watch it grow. Even at big, big Western Electric.

You know, that's the only way we'd want you to feel. If you feel like coming in with us.
