Candidates, issues on display

by Pete Caw

Candidates for state and local offices, along with representatives for the McGovern and Nixon tickets, will be on campus during the Political Union sponsored Political Awareness Week beginning Monday.

Along with the candidates and their representatives, there will be spokesmen for and against the various referendums and measures appearing on this November's ballot. Speakers from the minority political groups, such as the Socialist Worker's Party, have also been invited to attend.

Larry Brouse, Political Union president, called the planning and makeup of the week "the most ambitious thing ever done by the Political Union."

According to Brouse, a large part of the speeches will center around the question of criteria for a good candidate and for a good voter.

Brouse added it was his hope that student interest would be substantial in view of the "sacrifices made by various individuals to be here as speakers."

Campion fate still up in the air; negotiating with several groups

by Evie Pech and Lynn Kruse

There sits Campion Tower, the subject of much speculation since its closing in 1971. Its solitude immediately brings the question "What are we going to do with it?" to the minds of most people connected with S.U.

The Board of Trustees are presently negotiating with the South King County Economic Opportunities Board about the possibility of leasing the dorm.

SKEOB, a group of social action agencies working as "advocates of the poor," would only use part of the building. Because of this, similar organizations are being contacted as well.

John Bowman, chairman of the Board of Trustees' building and grounds committee, Mick Schreck, director of plant management, and William Adkisson, financial vice president, are conducting negotiations.

Because the building was designed and funded as a dorm by Housing and Urban Development, "any variance must be approved by HUD," Bowman explained.

"The variance in profit and non-profit organizations might make a difference as well. These programs seemed to fit out needs," Bowman added.

At the present time, Campion is housing a Vista training program.

A NUMBER of outside organizations are scheduled to be leasing it for periods of time throughout the year. Such organizations include the sports departments of UCLA, Chico State, University of California at Santa Barbara, and other colleges and universities.

The building is also scheduled for various community service operations. During October and November, Campion will be employed by the Private Independent Schools and will be the site of a Private Schools Minority Affairs seminar.

It is also still open for leasing by campus organization for special events.

In the case that Campion were to be leased or sold, there would be little or no effect on student parking. Schreck stated that "either that space or other spaces would be made available. In any case, the students would not lose their parking space."

With both Bellarmine and Xavier Halls nearly filled to capacity, one wonders why Campion has not been summoned to house all dormitory students.

Schreck agreed that Campion is "the best and nicest dorm facility," but it has not been reconverted because of its location. "It's away from campus and breaks up the campus unity."

In addition, the school received a moratorium on payments of the building as long as it is not being used. Reopening even a floor would jeopardize that situation, according to Fr. Leo Kaufmann, S.J., University Trustee.

However, if the need ever arose, Campion would definitely be placed on the active list once again, Schreck added.

Conference focuses on 'modern woman'

Dr. Harriet Stephenson, professor of business, advised women students to "... be prepared when opportunities appear, and to avoid negative outlooks."

Speaking at Feminine Focus, a new women's conference sponsored by AWS, yesterday afternoon, Dr. Stephenson presented her views on modern woman—who she is, and where she is going.

"I THINK this is one of the greatest times to be alive," Dr. Stephenson stated. She attributes this to the unlimited range of what women can be and do these days.

Dr. Stephenson's own interest lies primarily in the field of business—her specialty.

"Business opportunities have never been greater for women, mainly as a result of the Affirmative Action Programs."

In relating her own experience to the group, she recalled that trivial matters such as faculty women wearing pants to work has disappeared as an issue altogether.

DR. STEPHENSON used the above example to give weight to the comment that, "Society is finally trying to filter out what is important and what isn't—consequently we are eliminating trivial-surface issues."

She firmly believes that every individual is faced with one primary task—becoming a total person.

Dr. Harriet Stephenson

In order for male and female to achieve this goal, "We must allow values, ideas, and aspirations to be realized."

"In the past women were cautioned not to be 'achievement oriented,' a sure way not to attain a husband," she recalled.

IT IS ROLE playing and expectations such as these that she feels are diminishing and consequently will allow women to realize their fullest potential.

Her last word of advice to the group? "Don't take yourself too seriously—we must retain our sense of humor."

Protection agency needs advisory board members

Do you feel powerless in your attempt to influence or even get your voice heard by the federal government in matters concerning the environment?

Now is your chance to be heard! The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is organizing a Youth Advisory Board to present an opportunity for the 18 to 26-year-olds to express their views.

The EPA for Region 10, which covers Alaska, Washington, Oregon and Idaho, is interested in qualified candidates to fill the nine positions on the board. The candidates for this non-paid position need only be interested in the environment and have a background in an environment-related science.

Linda N. Warrick, executive secretary for the Youth Advisory Board, said, "The Board will serve as mouthpiece to the regional administrator for the viewpoints of the youths in environmental matters. Members will also be strongly encouraged to do environmental research pertaining to their interests."

Anyone interested should send their reasons and a resume of their background to: Y.A.B., Environmental Protection Agency, 1200 Sixth Avenue, Seattle, Washington 98101.

If there are any questions, Ms. Warrick or her associate, Mr. Nielson, will be glad to answer them. Their phone number is 442-1086.

A lonely mood permeates the Campion Tower dining hall.

"If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem."

—Eldridge Cleaver

Much can happen in four years—or very little. If you do not register to vote and actively participate in the upcoming national election you may be sorry.

For the first time in the history of this country 18 to 20 year olds will be eligible to vote. We must take advantage of this privilege.

As young new voters we have many special concerns—some unique to our age group. The draft, drug control, race relations, ecology, poverty and lifestyle issues all involve public policy and the government.

In order to assess the true value of your individual vote we ask you to consider the awesome power of governmental surveillance and its control over you as a citizen.

The exercise of your voting power is the most legitimate and inexpensive means you possess for changing the government and its policies.

Saturday is the last day to register to vote in the November election. Make your opinion known—act now!

Students still needed for committees

Sign-ups for various ASSU and University standing committees continue through Wednesday in the ASSU office, second floor—Chieftain. Office hours are 2-4:30 p.m.

As of yesterday afternoon, there were two persons signed up for senate position No. 1, while the other three senate positions had just one candidate each. The other elective office, freshman class president, had no one signed up for it yet.

One signee each for the appointive offices in the Academic Council, the student-faculty review board, and urban affairs was also reported. The board of admissions, graduate council (graduate students only), library council and schedules/registration/space are still in need of sign-ups.

gaining insight

To the editor:

It seems that it only took our publicity director spring and summer quarters to come up with the judgment that "nobody knows what is going on." (Spectator, Vol. XLI, No. 2, Tuesday-Oct. 3, 1972, page One.)

I wonder when the rest of the ASSU officers are going to come up with this insight. I hope that our publicity director will pass it on to them.

More importantly, will they do something to correct the situation after gaining this insight and how long will it take them to act on it?

Jeffrey E. A. Rietveld

congratulations

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the staffs of the Spectator and the Aegis. Once again their efforts have brought them national recognition for their outstanding achievements in college journalism. The awards that they have received accurately reflect the efforts of both the moderators and staff of our student newspaper and year-book, and I am confident that this high quality will be continued in the future.

Jolly good show!

Drama role does not inspire theatre career for student

by J. Wright Hotchkiss

Spending two weeks in the summer as an actor in a professional drama production can be enlightening without turning a person like Tom Tangney, a freshman in honors, into a drama major.

Tangney was one of seven amateur actors chosen for A Contemporary Theatre's (ACT) production of the musical The Me Nobody Knows.

"I CAN'T JUDGE professional theatre as such, from my experience. Seven out of the 12 of us were amateurs. They didn't treat us as professionals. In fact, they went out of their way to be kind to us. They had us repeat the lines over and over until we got them," Tangney observed.

The majority of the cast in The Me Nobody Knows, a reflective drama about teenagers in New York City, were amateurs under the age of 19. They began rehearsals three or four days before the normal two-week rehearsal period.

"They had us play leap frog for the tryouts. We said 'hello' to test more than our projection to see if we could communicate to the guy in the back row—and we sang a little. Then we read a soliloquy cold, followed by putting it into our own words. That was a good way to do things because, first you panic, then carry on. It was a very good idea but that was also the hardest."

THE AUDITION for the play was designed to discover those young people able to act naturally in front of an audience. Naturalness was vital to the play whose purpose was to re-

by Evie Pech

Thursday at noon in the library auditorium, the graduate studies committee will afford all students interested in graduate work an opportunity to learn about fellowships offered, and selection of and application to various graduate schools. According to Dr. Saltvig of the graduate studies office, this meeting is very important not only to juniors and seniors but to all students interested in attending graduate schools.

In dealing with the question "Is graduate study for me?", Dr. Saltvig urges students to seek advice from faculty members in their particular field of major. "We don't want students veal a human aspect of ghetto teenagers.

"Allie Woods, director, made it a point to develop camaraderie among the members of the cast. We introduced ourselves to each other and described ourselves for about five minutes each. The idea was not to be superficial and find out people's personalities," Tangney continued.

The technique of encouraging strong bonds among the cast members helped bring them together during the brief rehearsal period, he added.

DURING JUNIOR and senior high school Tangney attended U.W. plays, the Seattle Repertory Theatre productions and the Seattle Opera. It was through his parents that he heard about the interview for The Me Nobody Knows. He passed leapfrogging and the test for naturalness and got the part.

"I thoroughly enjoyed studying Shakespearean and Greek plays at Blanchet High School, but the Greek plays are kind of heavy in themselves."

The honors program leaves him little time for involvement in Teatro Inigo or capturing another part such as he had late this summer in North Seattle Community College's Oliver.

"I DOUBT that I would go into theatre as a profession. Even if I were good, it's a rough profession. You have to be lucky to be discovered," he said.

He studied acting at the Bathhouse Theatre on Green Lake summer before last. He admits he appreciates acting skills more in others.

Tom Tangney, student actor

Is graduate study for you?

to get turned off by graduate study in general, but to seek those fields where there is a need," he stresses. The student must make a realistic appraisal of his or her abilities in their field and uncover all information concerning opportunities in that field.

THE GRADUATE STUDIES office, located on the first floor of Marian, is open as a resource center for all students interested in furthering their education. It is open 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday for students to come in and browse through bulletins from various grad schools.

Available on file are current brochures from a wide selection of schools. These materials include information on school requirements and particular departmental requirements. Also accessible are numerous publications which evaluate different grad schools.

As for those students planning on attending graduate school in the fall of next year, Dr. Saltvig noted that they should be taking the Graduate Record Examination very soon. Applications for the December test may be picked up in the graduate studies office.

Throughout the month of October, students will have an opportunity to apply for major fellowships interchangeably. These include the Rhodes, Marshall, Fulbright and Danforth Fellowships.

Warriors' McGuire to talk at Chiefs' basketball tipoff

"For the first time, it looks like we may have it all together."

That's how Mick McHugh, alumni director, sees the Seattle University sporting scene, especially the 1972 Chieftain Tip-off Banquet.

THE EVENT will be on Oct. 13, at Campion Tower and will feature Al McGuire, head basketball coach at Marquette University.

"This is the first time the University has hosted an event such as this," added McHugh, "but having somebody like McGuire is a giant boost."

McGuire, coach of the Warriors for eight years and 1971 NCAA Coach of the Year, will head an impressive list of speakers, including head basketball coach Bill O'Connor and King County councilman and ex-Chieftain All-American, Johnny O'Brien.

THE NEW Chieftain coach O'Connor and his newly appointed staff of John Burnley and Dave Bike will be officially introduced at the banquet.

McHugh and Fr. Robert Rebhahn, S.J., associate alumni director, have obtained Victor Rossellini, owner of two Seattle restaurants, to cater the dinner. Social hour begins at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m.

TICKETS to the buffet dinner are $7.50 each or $15 per couple. Student tickets, according to Mc-Hugh, are $6 each and can be picked up in the Alumni House on campus.

"We want more togetherness at S.U.," said McHugh, "and we feel the students can be a large part of it."

Intramurals

Rosters for men's and women's intramural football and volleyball teams must be turned in to the intramural office in the Connolly P.E. Center by 3 p.m. Oct. 10, according to Ed Crafton and Jannet Curran, student intramural directors.

Each roster must include the name of the player, and his or her written signature, student number and credit hours. There is a minimum of ten players on each volleyball team and fifteen on each football roster.

ANY INDIVIDUAL who cannot find a team should sign up in the intramural office to be placed on one. Resident assistants are encouraged to form teams throughout the dorms.

Each team captain should put his phone number on the roster and be present at a meeting in room 156 tomorrow at 3 p.m. in Connolly Center.

Men's golf entries must be in by tomorrow at 3 p.m. The match will be on Oct. 11 at the Tyee Valley Golf Course.

THE WOMEN'S swim- and-trim program will begin Monday from 4-5 p.m. The program will involve swimming instruction and exercising. This program, which also makes the sauna available to all participants, will be in the west pool.

Anyone interested in officiating should attend a meeting on Monday at 3 p.m. in Connolly Center.

Anyone with any questions involving any intramural activity should contact either Crafton or Ms. Curran in the intramural office. The office, open from 1-4:30 p.m., is located in room 118 of the sports complex.

ABDULLA MAJHDOWI headed the ball in pre-game practice last night at Lower Woodland.

The Chieftain soccer team lost, 3-0, to Seattle Pacific last night at Lower Woodland Park.

The loss was the second league defeat for the Chiefs against one win. S.P.C. scored twice in the first half to put the game out of reach.

"They just out-hustled us to the ball," said head coach Hugh McArdle, following the game.

The Chiefs will play their fourth league contest Saturday, when they face Pacific Lutheran University. Game time is set for 7 p.m. at Lower Woodland Park.

The team will participate in the Husky Classic, Oct. 12-14.

Four teams from California — San Jose, U.C.L.A., Chico State and California — compete with S.U., the University of Washington, Western Washington State and Seattle Pacific College.

All 12 games scheduled in the tournament will be played at Husky Stadium. Four games are scheduled each day of the tournament with play commencing at 5 p.m. Oct. 12 and 13.

The final round is scheduled Saturday, Oct. 14, with games starting at noon.

Tickets are on sale at Husky Stadium and at Connolly P.E. Center. Adult tickets are $1 per day or $2 for a three-day pass.

Summer enrollment figures were down this year in comparison to last, according to Mary Alice Lee, registrar.

A total of 1569 students enrolled summer quarter. Last year's total was 1754. A fewer number of special programs may be partly responsible for the drop, Ms. Lee feels.

Any one of the three tests fulfills the requirement.

New features make dorm life easier

The University's student residence halls have acquired some new features this fall.

These features, which will affect campus students, are the availability of refrigerators and the privilege of dialing long-distance calls from their rooms, instead of having to rely on a pay phone.

Recently, the University had leased a number of refrigerators from a private company. The lease runs for three years, after which the University will acquire the refrigerators. Rental costs are $22.50 per refrigerator for the entire school year.

Xavier Hall received a remodeling job on its basement. A color television was moved from the lobby to a separate television room downstairs. A complete weight-lifting room, a typing room, a bicycle storage room and two piano rooms were also added to the basement.

Merger with ASSU executive board eventual goal of AWS

Mary Pat Johnson, Lena Low and Maureen McGlowne

by Bev Avants

Plans are in the making this year to see the Associated Women Students work closer with the ASSU and eventually become a part of the ASSU executive board.

According to Mary Pat Johnson, president, Lena Low, vice president, and Maureen McGlowne, secretary, the present setup would be phased into an office of women's affairs which they feel is needed as a task-force vehicle.

MARY PAT, a junior in community services, says, "Its purpose would be to further women's awareness as well as exploring specific female needs on campus."

The officers' three major goals this year are structure, direction and service. They hope to explore the questions for women of who, what and why are you. Discussions, film and speaker series and symposiums are just a few activities planned to explore these questions.

Topics covered will be health and human sexuality, employment opportunities for women, channeling of these opportunities, academics and special problems of minority women.

MAUREEN, a sophomore hoping to enter the new rehabilitation services program, expressed her concern to offer a Christian perspective when discussing these topics. "When having seminars on sex, for example, we should have priests present to discuss the real Catholic point of view."

"We would like to serve the needs of minority women and find out what these needs are," said Lena, a junior economics major. "It is a question among minority women of which comes first, liberation of their race or women themselves," she added.

The need for a day-care center is a possible service being explored as many women may have noticed on a questionnaire distributed during registration. "If the need is established, we are thinking in terms of a co-op system where women may watch other women's children during their free periods," Maureen explained.

According to Maureen, the possibility of extending the women's intramural sports program to an exchange with other schools is being considered.

"I WOULD LIKE to make it clear that the three of us aren't trying to cram any liberation movement down the women students' throats. Each woman as an individual must realize that a woman's role in society is changing and there are different degrees of liberation," Lena explained.

Mary Pat added, "People have a stereotyped image of women's liberation and it's derogatory. I prefer to call it the female question. And AWS simply wants to act as a vehicle of communication."

AWS sponsored a "Feminine Focus" yesterday in Bellarmine study lounge. The conference, which was particularly for new women students, featured Dr. Harriet Stephenson, S.U. business teacher, as a keynote speaker. Her topic related to the challenging process of becoming a person.

A NEW AWS news bulletin entitled Emphasis will be out to further discuss AWS' goals, structure and relationship with ASSU.
