Students defend $100 supplement in court

by John Ruhl

Student leaders and officials of four private colleges in Washington testified to the Thurston County Superior Court on Dec. 18 at a fact-finding hearing concerning constitutionality of tuition supplements to resident students in Washington.

Disbursement of the state funds to resident students had been stayed by court order last October by the Washington State Supreme Court.

STUDENTS represented S.U., Seattle Pacific College, Gonzaga University and Pacific Lutheran University. Pat Lupo, ASSU president, was S.U.'s representative.

"The questions revolved around academic freedom within the colleges . . . and the financial need of the students," Lupo said.

Students were cross examined by attorneys of both parties to determine whether students have sufficient need for the money, according to Howard Bundy, student body president at S.P.C.

THE RESULTS of the hearing "will supplement written testimonies taken from college administrators at each of the colleges," according to Robert Gunter, attorney for Washington Friends of Higher Education, a Tacoma lobbying group aiding the students. These will be combined to make a "statement of fact," he said.

"The statement of fact now has been agreed upon, basically, by all parties and is expected to be signed and certified for the Washington State Supreme Court by the end of the week," Gunter said.

"Parties on both sides will point to the statement of fact as a basis for their legal arguments," he continued. Arguments will be made to the Washington Supreme Court in Olympia on Feb. 5.

The plaintiffs, a group of Washington residents and a District of Columbia based corporation, are contesting the constitutionality of the tuition supplements on grounds that they violate church-state separation clauses in both the state and federal constitutions.

THE DEFENDING students argue that "besides the religious affiliations there is still academic freedom within the colleges," Lupo said.

Various criteria will be used to determine whether the private schools are sectarian: religious courses offered and requirements for graduation, admission processes, religious composition of the studentry of each school and financial needs will all be considered, Gunter said.

The outcome of the case will affect nine private colleges in Washington. Tuition supplements to students adding up to $160,000 are at stake at S.U. alone, according to William Adkisson, vice president for finance.

"IF THE program is held unconstitutional on grounds of the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution," Gunter said, "there is a possibility that we will appeal."

"But if it is held unconstitutional on state grounds, the U.S. Supreme Court would probably have no inclination to hear the case," he continued.

Letters will go out to all S.U. resident students this week to solicit a fifty-cent donation to help defray lawyers' fees, Lupo said.

"WE'LL USE any excess funds (from student donations) for more lobbying in Olympia to increase the tuition supplements," he said.

Even if the present program is ruled unconstitutional, lobbyists believe a constitutional program can be fashioned and passed by the state legislature, Lupo added.

Chieftain renovation nears end

STUDENTS RELAX AND STUDY in the newly decorated Chieftain cafeteria. The project is scheduled to be completed next week.

Whether it's the place they go to grab a quick cup of coffee to wake their weary peepers early in the morning or the spot they choose to drink a few cups of beer after a Chieftain win, patrons of the S.U. Chieftain have noticed a considerable change this quarter.

A new layer of paint, attractive wood booths and a snappy array of brightly colored curtains are among the completed improvements.

"A series of graphics will go up on the wall where the mirror used to be in the Chieftain," Joe Gardiner, assistant director of plant management, said.

Gardiner said that the work was performed by the S.U. maintenance crew over the Christmas vacation. He added that the improvements will be completed by Jan. 15.

Gull Studios of Seattle designed the work at the Chieftain.

Jim 'Smiley' Connolly is new second vice president

Jim "Smiley" Connolly

The office of ASSU second vice president will be filled by Jim (Smiley) Connolly, third quarter senior in accounting. Connolly will replace Creighton Balinbin who resigned last quarter because of "a conflict of interest and a personal objective."

Eleven persons signed up for the position and were screened by the senate committee of structures and organizations. The committee's recommendations went to Pat Lupo, ASSU president, who appointed Connolly. The senate ratified the appointment.

CONNOLLY SAID he was interested in politics but "up to this quarter the grade point average was always too high and my grades too low. I wasn't able to run. Now my grades have come up and the requirements have gone down."

While at S.U. he joined A Phi O's and was an officer for three years. Connolly was also a member of the Ski Club and The Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM) and he worked on Frosh Orientation, Homecoming and the teacher evaluations.

The new second vice president has been in office only a few weeks and has not met with the activities committee. He said he would have a better idea on what direction the committee will take after that meeting. Referring to plans for winter quarter, he said, "I hope to continue all the programs that are now under way." He said he would like a better schedule for the ten movies planned this quarter.

SPRING QUARTER will be co-ordinated by Connolly who noted that it would be difficult for him to back a special spring program of his own because he will not be at S.U. to see it through. The activities committee will meet the seventh Thursday of the quarter to plan spring quarter activities.

Connolly would like to see the ASSU, in general, produce the teacher evaluations and run a smooth election. He thought the senate is "a good voicing ground for the students, it's a chance to bring up an idea and get more recognition than going on a one-man campaign."

The new office hours for the second vice president are 2-4:40 p.m. daily except Wednesdays and by appointment.

Teacher training program will be offered next fall

A 40-hour Montessori Teacher Training Program will be offered next fall on a limited space-available basis, according to Fr. William J. Codd, S.J., professor of education and director of the University's E.M. Standing Montessori Studies Center.

The new program is being offered by the School of Education.

CREDIT COURSE during the fall quarter will include "Child Psychology" and "Sensorial Education." "Montessori Math and Language" and "Comparative and Observational Study of Education" will be offered during the winter with "Cosmic Environmental Learning" and Montessori Pre-School and Elementary Student Training" in spring.

A preliminary class entitled "Montessori Overview" will also be offered.

Most classes will be offered in the late afternoon and evening, with some necessary exceptions.

Fr. Codd explained that three different options of study will be available to students:

The first and minimum program entails the completion of three years of college in readiness for a fourth year education major to prepare for the Washington State provisional teaching credential.

THE SECOND option is a program for fifth-year students with a provisional teaching certificate

The third is a program for experienced and fully certified teachers interested in adding further individualized Montessori training on the kindergarten-to-eighth-grade levels. It is not a master's degree program presently.

The cost for this unique teacher training program is based on the regular tuition schedule.

Applications with a $10 non-refundable registration fee are still being accepted at the Montessori Studies Center.

"More than 30 candidates have applied for admission to the program," Fr. Codd said. "From these 30 candidates, we must select no more than 25 full-time regular students for this program."

Further information is available from 1 to 4:30 p.m. during the week by Fr. Codd or his secretary at the Montessori Studies Center on campus, 626-6664.

Rashomon chosen to participate in festival

Teatro Inigo's production of Rashomon is one of five finalists chosen to participate in the American College Theatre Festival regional finals scheduled for this February in Seattle.

The winner of the regional festival will be eligible to participate in a week-long national festival in Washington, D.C. Ten colleges in the United States will perform in Washington, D.C.

OTHER REGIONAL finalists include the University of Alaska, University of Puget Sound, Clark College and Washington State University. The region includes all colleges from Oregon, Washington and Alaska.

The festival is sponsored by American Airlines and American Oil Company.

Rashomon was directed by William Dore, drama professor, and costumed by Lois Aden, drama professor. Setting and lighting were designed by Phil Howard of the drama department.

THE CAST includes Ann Matthews, Roseanne Orton, Susan Sullivan, Dustin Waln, Kevin O'-

Hara, William Howard, Ken Kurtenbach, Tom Orton and Lawrence Sherman.

The technical staff includes Christine Notske, Leslie Kay Somerville, Maria Waln, Ann Conroy and Ed Guppy.

A special exhibit has been set up in the A.A. Lemieux Library dealing with the production of Rashomon.

letter to editor

assu in timbuktu?

To the editor:

This letter is intended as a review of some of the most important events which occurred last quarter in the ASSU which in theory affect the students. An event which went unnoticed due to the end of the quarter timing of the meeting was the senate's rubber stamp approval of Jim "Smiley" Connolly as ASSU second vice president.

His appointment was highly questionable on a number of grounds but the senate chose to reject its responsibility and not bother investigating his background.

ONE OF the major jobs of the second vice president is to work as an active member of the activities committee, yet Jim was neither aware of the purpose of the committee nor any legislation affecting it.

No senator even bothered to ask why Jim had never run for office or become actively involved in the ASSU before. It is a puzzle why he developed the sudden interest—was it possibly the ASSU scholarship?

If this is the case it will be interesting to see how this bribe will affect his performance in light of the history of nonfeasance and malfeasance of previous ASSU officers who were so endowed.

THE SENATE also spent all of last quarter debating and stressing the importance of attendance at meetings then gave senator Bill Holland a full quarter's leave of absence to work in Olympia. This logic overwhelms me but I'm sure Sen. Holland will represent the ASSU as well in Olympia as anywhere else. Now, which senator would like to represent the ASSU in Timbuktu?

Looking back over my four quarters on the senate I can see only failure, corruption, inactivity and tokenism in the ASSU. Yet I still have the faint hope that with a new quarter will come a new beginning. For all concerned let's hope this will be the case.

Blaze in Xavier hall doused by sprinklers

Fortunately the automatic sprinkler system in the basement of Xavier Hall is working and doing its job well.

According to Battalion Chief W. E. Landers it was the sprinkler system which squelched the fire in Xavier Hall's basement Sunday night.

"OUR WORK was completely 'clean up duty'", he stated in reference to the effort being put forth by two engine and ladder crews called to the site.

Fr. Leonard Sitter, S.J., director of student services and resident dorm director, discovered the fire at approximately 10 p.m. The fire department was notified immediately.

Fr. Sitter, in attempting to remove one of the trash cans, received second degree burns on the fingers of his left hand. He was taken to Providence Hospital for treatment.

LANDERS reported no substantial damage due to the fire. However, he added jokingly, "you may have lost a couple of trash cans."

He speculated that the fire was caused by a cigarette or match thrown down the refuse chute from one of the dorm floors.

Fashion careers

Fellowships being offered

Have a flair for fashions? Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers, Ltd., in New York City is offering full-tuition fashion fellowships to graduating men and women yearly. Tobe-Coburn has established itself in the world of fashion education, offering fashion merchandising and promotion.

Each $2000 fellowship covers the full tuition of a one year course, which grants an Associate Degree in Occupational Studies (A.O.S.). The school is accredited by the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools.

Careers led to by the schooling include merchandising, advertising and fashion coordination.

Ten full weeks of paid work in New York department or specialty stores and other organizations provide on-the-job training as a supplement to classroom training. Lectures by fashion world notables and visits to manufacturers, buying offices, fashion shows, museums and social events are included.

Seniors may secure registration blanks for the fellowships from the Dean's Office, the Placement Office, the Director of Admissions, or from Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers, Ltd., 851 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10021.

Registration closes Feb. 15.

Peterson moves from admissions to undergraduate law program

by Jeffrey E. A. Rietveld

Dr. Ronald A. Peterson, present University director of admissions, will be devoting full-time to planning law courses for S.U. at the undergraduate level as soon as a new director of admissions is appointed.

Peterson, connected with admissions at S.U. for 24 years, had planned to resign from his post at the end of this year, but "Father President wanted me to get started on it right away". He is a lawyer by training and a member of the Washington Bar Association.

PETERSON will be studying the feasibility of a undergraduate law program at S.U., seeing if the courses will fit into the five-credit module system here and also trying to find out how great a demand there is for a paralegal program in Seattle.

A paralegal program is not a pre-law program, Peterson stressed. It is a professional program designed to train legal assistants and legal administrators.

A two-year program might be set up for training legal assistants while a four-year program could be set up to train legal administrators, who must know how to manage a law firm and handle procedural matters.

THESE POSITIONS will be above that of a legal secretary while being below that of a lawyer, according to Peterson. The purpose of such paralegal professionals would be to handle the routine works of a lawyer so that the attorney might better serve the community he works in.

If deemed feasible, the program would be set up under

Dr. Ronald Peterson

American Bar Association (ABA) guidelines. The ABA has had pilot programs since 1968 and Peterson will be working with the ABA in setting up this program.

As director of admissions, Peterson runs a two-fold program, one facet of which is processing applications while the other is recruiting students.

ON THE recruiting side of the ledger, the admissions office is keeping up relations with high schools. It also serves as a base from which the ASSU's Student-to-Student Committee operates.

A great deal of travelling is also involved in order to recruit students. Last year, Peterson travelled to Southeast Asia for recruitment, as well as various places in the United States. The trips are primarily made to Western states and Hawaii.

Peterson says that he will miss the travel, but he is "very enthusiastic about the law courses."

ALTHOUGH he can now only devote part of his time to studying the feasibility of a paralegal program, he can "hardly wait" to get into it full-time.

Applications for the position of admissions director are being accepted in the President's office.

RON HOWARD STRETCHES for two in last Saturday's confrontation with Santa Clara. The effort wasn't enough, however, to break the Broncos this time around.

Williams nominated for Pizza Hut basketball team

S.U.'s starting Chieftain Center, 6'8" senior Greg Williams, was recently named to the ballot of the Pizza Hut Basketball Classic.

His selection puts him in contention with UW's Louie Nelson, Washington State's Mike Dolven and University of Kansas's Wilson Barrow for a spot in the April 14 all star contest at Las Vegas.

WILLIAMS received the honor in view of his high scoring and rebounding performances during the season.

The team, of which Williams may be a part, will be coached by Southern California's Bob Boyd.

Proceeds from the contest will

THE REBELS placed fourth in the WCAC last year, with a 8-6 league record.

In the last two games played between S.U. and Vegas, the two took one apiece and will be looking to break the tie.

The Rebels should not pose the threat to the Chiefs that San Francisco and Santa Clara did this last weekend. A victory there would be good for the Chiefs' league standings.

SANTA CLARA PLAYER takes his shot amidst Chieftain opposition. This Bronco and his teammates left the Chiefs in the dust.

League leading Broncos—Dons trample Chiefs in weekend action

It was said that the only difference between San Francisco's Dons and Santa Clara's Broncos is in name and not in talent.

Well, whoever said it was probably right, as both the Dons and the Broncos did away with S.U.'s Chieftains last week.

The Santa Clara team took the Chiefs down a notch Saturday, with a 70-64 throttling.

The Dons, noted for their size as well as their talent, controlled the game from tipoff to horn. By the first locker room time they led 33-22.

Forward Jerry Bellotti, 6'6", 195 lbs. threw in 21 points for the Broncos, making him the game leader for both teams.

S.U.'s answer to Bellotti's tally was center Greg Williams with 18.

Neither team was hitting to their potential during the game, with the Chiefs' Rod Derline being unable to zero in up to expectations.

In rebounding, the Broncos brought down 42 to Seattle's 35. Forward Fred Lavaroni and center Greg Williams led their respective teams in that department.

Three of the Chiefs starters, Williams, Forward Ron Howard and Forward Bob Gross, fouled out in the final period, severely limiting the team's offensive power.

Late in the final period, just prior to the loss of the three, S.U. pulled within 3 points of Santa Clara, only to fall again to the wayside.

Also, in this period, the Chief's

Lenzy Stuart went in at his forward slot, apparently recovered from a bout with the flu.

All things considered, the contest was dominated by the Broncos, offensively and defensively.

Head Coach of the Santa Clara Cagers, Carroll Williams, once stated that they could take the league title away from San Francisco this season. After viewing both teams in action, it seems very possible.

In the Papoose game prior to the Varsity contest S.U.'s squad defeated Ruth Reality 77-67.

Sophomore guard Jim Ferguson tossed in 28 points for the Papooses with Chuck Hepworth sinking 18 for Ruth.

At the half, S.U. maintained a 47-26 lead.

The Chiefs just couldn't pull it off last Thursday night in their attempt to subdue the University of San Francisco Dons.

The Dons, last season's conference title-holders, didn't look quite like champion stock during the first half. The Chiefs did their homework and simply had U.S.F. psyched-out. Passes flew out of bounds and shots just wouldn't hit the basket.

AT ONE point the Chiefs boasted a lead of 13. Then as quickly as it had materialized, the Chieftain magic vanished. At half the score stood 34-30 in favor of the Dons.

The Chieftain fans spent most of the second half on their feet. It was a real seesaw match at times, with the Chiefs putting out in spurts but never quite making things stick. The final score made the struggle evident: U.S.F. 66, S.U. 60.

BOB GROSS had his best night to date, both on offense and defense. He racked up 16, to take the high point honors for the Chiefs. Greg Williams was right behind with 14. Rod Derline and Ron Howard were next in line with 12 each.

The minimal action seen by Lenzy Stuart had some effect on the Chiefs, but the team was far from falling apart without him.

Phil Smith and Kevin Restani held high point honors for the Dons with a cool 20 each. None of their teammates came close to them in the scoring department.

In the preliminary game last Thursday, the S.U. Papooses fell to the Renton Roadrunners. The Paps were stranded without the presence of leading scorer Jim Ferguson. The final score gave the game to Renton, 81-70.

Intramural Sports Roundup

All team captains whose teams are participating in men's basketball at S.U. must attend the meeting at 4 p.m. Tuesday in 155 at Connolly P.E. Center.

Rules and regulations concerning the program will be discussed.

Those interested in refereeing intramural basketball games must attend the meeting tomorrow at 5 p.m. in the Connolly Center Conference Room. Contact Ed Crafton at 626-6738.

A self defense class, being offered starting Jan. 21, is open to all S.U. students, faculty, staff, alumni and sports associate members.

The class will be held every Thursdays from 4-6 p.m.

Saturday beginning at noon in Connolly Center.

Don Williams, a professional karate instructor, will serve as teacher.

The ladder tournament will begin play in three weeks, bringing with it the chance for students to participate in a wide array of sports.

Jan. 19 at 5 p.m. is the deadline for all women's intramural basketball rosters to be turned in to the intramurals office at Connolly P.E. Center.

There must be a minimum of eight players to a team. Games will be played on Tuesdays and

Tomorrow last day to signup for interdisciplinary dissent course

Tomorrow is the last day to sign up for an interdisciplinary, interuniversity course titled Dissent and Affirmation. Four colleges and universities, S.U., Bellevue Community College, Ft. Wright College and the U.W., are participating in the course scheduled for Mondays and Thursdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. Each school contributes both students and faculty to the course. THE CLASS will be taught at Lakeside Middle School, formerly St. Nicholas School, 1501 10th E.

John Darrah, the public defender, Irving Clark, a Seattle attorney, and George Sundlong, former administrative assistant to former Sen. Ernest Gruening from Alaska, will also be instructors in the class. Earlier, The Spectator had erroneously reported that they were enrolled in the class.

The three - credit pass - fail course was offered on an independent study basis last quarter.

A FEW OF the dissenters to be discussed include Socrates, Joan of Arc, Cromwell, the Berigan brothers and Erich Fromm.

Interested students are asked to sign up in the chaplain's office, Pigott 301.

University relations seeks new director

The University is now accepting applications for the position of director of University relations.

THE DIRECTOR is in charge of the office of University relations, implementing the public information, publications and alumni programs.

Applicants should have at least a bachelor's degree, skill and experience in print and/or electronic media and an imaginative approach to promotion.

Academic credentials, resume and three references should be sent to the President's office.

THE NEW director will replace William Fritz of Public Affairs Associates who was hired for a one year term last year.

Fritz was hired as a consultant to plan, develop and recommend a comprehensive and cohesive public and community relations program for the University.

Former nursing dean dies in L.A. after long illness

Sr. Mary Ruth Niehoff, O.P., 88, former dean of the University's School of Nursing, died recently in Los Angeles after a long illness.

A native of Minnesota, Sr. Ruth attended Willis Business College in Portland and entered the novitiate of the Dominican Sisters Congregation of the Holy Cross in 1928. She took her vows in 1930. She attended Grays Harbor Junior College in Aberdeen and trained for nursing at St. Joseph Hospital in Aberdeen and Providence Hospital here.

SR. RUTH was a staff nurse and then for 16 years administrator at St. Joseph Hospital in Aberdeen.

She earned her B.S. at S.U. and her M.A. in nursing education from St. Louis University in St. Louis.

Sr. Ruth joined the S.U. nursing faculty in 1952, was named acting dean in 1962 and dean in 1964. In 1968 she became a consultant for collegiate schools of nursing with the National League of Nursing, Inc., in New York. The next year she went to Los Angeles and aided a Head Start program's health education until failing health forced her to retire.

SR. RUTH was a member of the advisory committee for the Public Health Service Hospital here and was honored as a woman of distinction at a Matrix Table banquet here. A Sr. Ruth Niehoff Award has been established at S.U. to be awarded annually to an outstanding nursing student.

Survivors are three sisters, Sr. Kathleen Niehoff, O.S.F., Rochester, Minn., and Mrs. Eleanor Duncan and Mrs. Leona Widman, both of Los Angeles, and two brothers, Lawrence Niehoff, New Ulm, Minn., and Robert Niehoff, Redding, Calif.
